Cultural Consideration

For those of you visiting Nepal, we suggest cultural information to help you adjust and feel comfortable:

Dress code is as important for men as it is for women. Men and women should wear pants instead of shorts when touring Kathmandu. It's fine for men in vests, but they shouldn't get naked. Women must be as modest.

Hindus are concerned about ritual contamination of food when touched by someone outside their caste or religion. Therefore, do not touch exposed foods, and when drinking from a container used by others, avoid touching your lips with them. Do not eat food with your left hand and be sure to give or receive food only with your right hand. Shoes are considered degrading. So put them down and undress them before you put your feet on anything. If you enter a house in Nepal, follow the example of your host to decide to take off your shoes, but when entering a temple or monastery, you must remove them.

You will pass Buddhist walls, chortens, and Buddhist stupas throughout the tour, and follow local traditions, and should turn them to your right.
